Sixth Grade

Self Portraits

At the beginning of the year, students did a series of drawings from life to sharpen their observational skills. Before starting their self portraits, the class looked at a diverse selection of portraits created in various styles. Each student worked on representing their appearance in their own style, although they all used mirrors to help them think through the particular shapes of their face. After drawing the basic composition, students had to decide on a background, which they colored in using watercolors.
